Chapter 1 by Tailors <3

A sleek, black cat jumped up into a kitchen bench where a girl stood making breakfast. “Taffy! No! Not on the bench!” The cat meowed and jumped off the bench, landing gracefully. The cat, Taffy, slowly strutted into the girl’s bedroom and hopped up onto her bed. Then the mind-rain came.

The mind-rain was an invention made by a scientist to give humans the ability to speak to animals. It ultimately succeeded with a few side effects. The government let out an invisible gas into the public. The scientist said it would either: Make humans understand animals or make animals understand humans, It ended up working both ways.

“Aaarrgghh! What the hell?!” The once sleek black cat looked at itself in the floor length mirror in the girls bedroom. It was no longer a sleek black cat. "Orrite, orrite fine!"

As Allis walked away, Taffy continued looking absently at his reflection. He glanced at the door as it began to open. "Oh hello Mistress..." Taffy said as the girl walked into her bedroom. She squealed and covered her mouth. "What the hell?" She whispered.

"Don't worry Mistress, I'm confused too..."

The girl stared at him.

"Taffy?"

"Yes, Mistress." Taffy licked the back of his hand. "Or should I say Lena, now that we're even."

She slowly backed out of the room. "You're... Human."

"Not entirely." Taffy showed her his black ears and tail. "I think I'm a half cat, half human."

Lena didn't seem to believe him.

"But, how did you..."

"Well, he's not the only one."

They both turned to the source of the voice. Allis was back on the windowsill again.

Lena screamed, scaring Allis away. Taffy rushed to her side to calm her down.

Then they heard a crash and a scream. They heard shouts. They both ran outside.

"What is happening?" Lena demanded.
